Although the impact of Brexit is far from clear at this point in time the general direction should start to unravel over the next 3 months. Whatever the future Companies need to start to analyse and plan and try to understand the impact on their businesses, developing response and strategies relating to pretty much all functions of the business.

Planning in a vacuum can be challenging and understanding an industry response may help individual companies to develop more appropriate strategies. But being able to share thoughts and ideas can be difficult, with lack of contacts and concerns about confidentiality.

The Brexit Round Tables are dinner events, held under Chatham House Rules, allow the sharing of ideas and concerns. The evening will be chaired by Nick White, European Advisor for tx2events and include a presentation from an expert looking at potential impacts, this is followed by a Q&A session and lastly a general discussion on issues and potential directions around a three course dinner.

The speaker for the first Brexit Round table is John Higgins CBE, Director General, DIGITALEUROPE.

John Higgins CBE was appointed Director General of DIGITALEUROPE, the association for the digital technology industry in Europe, in November 2011 following nine years leading its UK member association, Intellect. He is the public face of the digital sector in Europe and speaks regularly on platforms and at conferences throughout Europe and indeed world-wide.
